Tips for Creating an Enjoyable Halloween for Children with Autism

- Let your child practice wearing their costume.
- Write a social narrative describing what your child will do on Halloween.
- Create a visual schedule.
- Practice trick or treating in a familiar environment.
- Keep trick or treating session short and comfortable.
- Use role play to practice receiving and/or giving treats.
- If your child with autism has difficulty with change, you may want to gradually decorate the house.
- Halloween looks different for every child on the spectrum. Use your intuition and follow their lead. If you only make it to three houses, it's okay!
